

'CHRISTMAS IN ANGEL FALLS' Synopsis

Gabriel "Gabby" Messinger (Rachel Boston) is a Guardian Angel who can't seem to stop playing matchmaker. After meddling in another couple's lives, the Angel Michael D'Angelo (Beau Bridges) reminds Gabby about the rules: they are there to offer guidance and not impeded on "free will." But love is a wonderful thing and Gabby just wants people who love each other to be together. Michael, ever the voice of reason, tells Gabby she shouldn't get involved in things she doesn't understand. Still, she wonders what it would be like to be in love and have someone care about her in that way. But rules are rules. In hopes that Gabby won't get caught in hot water again, Michael assigns her to the town of Angel Falls. Though brightly decorated with glittering lights and colors, the town has lost its Christmas spirit and it's Gabby's job to bring it back.

Gabby gets right to work on her special assignment and decides to apply for a holiday volunteer coordinator position at the local church. On her way there, she runs into the volunteer fire captain, Jack Avery (Paul Greene), and attempts to make small talk, which doesn't seem to go over too well. She shrugs it off and continues on to the church where she is offered the position on the spot. Gabby, eager to hit the ground running, asks for the list of volunteers so she can get started. Sadly, the pastor shares that the townspeople aren't offering to volunteer like they used to.

As she explores the town and gets to know more about the local residents, she strikes up an unexpected friendship with Jack, who also happens to own the local hardware store. Gabby begins to realize there is more than meets the eye in Angel Falls and she'll have to work on individual festive spirit, including Jack's, as well as the town's festive spirit. Upon more investigating, Gabby finds out the Community Center that used to bring the town together at Christmas for the annual pageant and potluck was closed down a year ago. With the help of a local teen, Gabby launches a website highlighting the heydays of Christmas in Angel Falls that brings back fond memories for the townspeople and gets them back in the Christmas spirit. Although it's a seemingly impossible task, Gabby enlists Jack's help to fix the laundry list of repairs needed to get the community center up and running in time for the big day. As they work together, Gabby begins to have feelings for Jack that she's never felt before, prompting her to question her special assignment.

Though happy that the town has found its Christmas spirit once again and excited to see the townspeople come together like they did years ago, Gabby struggles with having to leave Angel Falls. As her time there comes to an end, she has a heart-to-heart with Michael that leads to a surprising decision about her future.
