ENTERTAINMENT'S BIGGEST SUCCESS STORY!

DANICA MCKELLAR AND ANDREW W. WALKER STAR IN 'LOVE IN DESIGN' PREMIERING SEPTEMBER 15, ON HALLMARK CHANNEL

STUDIO CITY, CA – August 1, 2018 – Danica McKellar (“The Wonder Years”) and Andrew W. Walker (“Wedding March 4: Something Old, Something New,” “My Secret Valentine”) star in Hallmark Channel’s “Love in Design,” a new, original movie premiering Saturday, September 15, (9 p.m. ET/PT).

Hannah (McKellar), known for modernizing outdated spaces, has a TV show called “Love in Design.” Lately, ratings have slipped and her boss wants Hannah to host the show from her hometown of Lewisburg, a quaint community Hannah says doesn’t do modern. Tasked to renovate the town’s historic manor into a B&B, Hannah is up for the challenge but not ready to work with the architect overseeing the project: her ex-boyfriend Jeff (Walker), who ended the relationship when Hannah’s career took her to Los Angeles. But now, after laying eyes on each other, it’s clear their attraction is still strong. In fact, when the cameraman catches them in a moment of feisty banter, Hannah’s boss is delighted with the footage that captures their dynamic chemistry. When the network screens a rough cut, the town loves the couple’s onscreen sparks. With their flame rekindled, can they try to go beyond their comfort zones and reach across the distance between them?

“Love in Design” is a Love in Design Pictures, Inc. production. Stan Spry and Eric Scott Woods are the executive producers and Phyllis Laing serves as producer. Steven R. Monroe directs from a screenplay by Nicole Baxter.
