

ENTERTAINMENT'S BIGGEST SUCCESS STORY!

'UNDER THE AUTUMN MOON'

Synopsis

Alex McKenna (Lindy Booth) is at the top of her professional game, a junior executive at Great Frontiers, the country's leading outdoor recreation goods and gear retailer. She's worked hard to get where she is and plans to climb even higher. After hearing that a new vice president position is opening at the company, and that her work rival Ben (Casey Manderson) wants it as much as she, Alex accepts boss Roger Hilton's (Paul Essiembre) request to fly to North Dakota to check out a financially troubled ranch he is looking to acquire for company retreats. Eager to best Ben, who has already found a great location for Great Frontiers' new national distribution center, Alex hopes that Harmony Ranch is suitable to serve as the company's new national employee training center, thereby demonstrating her executive ability and keeping her in the race for the vice president spot.

Harmony Ranch is everything the name suggests – nature in all its big sky glory with beautiful vistas framing every day. Approaching its centennial, Harmony has belonged to four generations of Ketchums and was a successful working ranch until a few years ago when the remaining Ketchums, brother-and-sister Josh (Wes Brown) and Taylor (Natalie Lisinska) converted it to a dude ranch to increase income and keep it running. Now facing foreclosure, Taylor is resigned to selling while Josh is dead-set against it, though he knows they must.

With one potential buyer in place who will raze the ranch for pasture, Josh hopes to convince Alex that Harmony should remain a working ranch if Great Frontiers buys it. He shares with her every aspect of the ranch and its natural beauty, which includes star-filled night skies and mile after mile of pristine land untouched by development. More than anything, however, Alex's childhood love of horses and riding is reignited, as she and Josh ride the trails of Harmony Ranch. It isn't long before Alex comes to share Josh's vision for Harmony, as well as a spark of affection between them that is undeniable.

Now committed to keeping Harmony as natural as possible, Alex is surprised when Roger and Ben show up for the centennial celebration. She learns that Roger has already purchased a site for the company's retreats and she is devastated, as much for Josh as for herself. Finally facing the ranch's inevitable future, Josh knows he must sell to a neighboring ranch whose plans for Harmony include plowing it under for grazing. Even worse, it appears that the budding romance between Josh and Alex will also be plowed under. But if Alex can come up with a plausible plan to turn Harmony Ranch into a profitable venture and make it part of the Great Frontiers corporate family, that will buy them some time to let love bloom.
