

'AURORA TEAGARDEN MYSTERIES: AN INHERITANCE TO DIE FOR'
Synopsis

Librarian and crime buff Aurora Teagarden (Candace Cameron Bure) hosts her Real Murders Club's annual Agatha Christie Night at the gothic mansion of Gladys Allison McCourt (Karen Kruper). At her niece Lizzie's (Julia Benson) wedding reception, Gladys toasts the couple then drops dead, killed by cyanide poisoning.

When Gladys' will is read, everyone is shocked to hear that Gladys' assistant Tannis (Alison Araya) gets $50,000, while her ex-private chef Jeremy (Jason McKinnon) gets a whopping $500,000. Her son Cade (Preston Vanderslice), who serves as CEO of the family business, Allicourt Industries, gets only $25,000 a year for 10 years, and the remainder – the bulk of the estate – goes to casual friend Aida Teagarden (Marilu Henner).

Her curiosity only outweighed by her personal connection to the case, Aurora sets out to find the killer, despite the usual warnings from Lawrenceton PD to keep her distance. Assisted by new beau Professor Nick Miller (Niall Matter) and her Real Murders Club pals, Aurora methodically assesses every potential suspect, of which there is a rapidly growing number. Caterer Jeremy O'Connor's bequest seems exceedingly large, especially considering he quit his job as Gladys' private chef and left her in the lurch. Gladys' assistant Tannis and her only son Cade point to each other as the probable murderer. Each feels the other had undue influence over Gladys, and both have viable reasons for wanting the wealthy matriarch dead. There's Victor Hansen (Michael David Simms), who left his post as CEO of Allicourt under mysterious circumstances, and even college student Liane (Matreya Scarrwener), who served Gladys the poison wine and who is on the premises when a second murder is committed.

While the police conduct a formal investigation, Aurora embarks on her own unorthodox journey, questioning everyone, including an out-of-town attorney who changed Gladys' will a month prior to her death. Before all is said and done, however, both Aurora and Aida will come face-to-face with the killer, whose loaded gun is trained on Aurora. With help too far away to count on, Aurora will have to stall, hide from and sidestep the now-disgraced killer whose plot she has foiled...or else become victim #3 in this sordid tale of greed and murder.
