

'CHRISTMAS AT GRACELAND: HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS'
Synopsis

Harper Ellis (Kaitlin Doubleday) returns home to Memphis for the holidays to stay with her sister Maggie (Sunny Mabrey), Maggie's husband Keith (Alan Wells) and their children Petra (Hailey Harris) and Anna (Anniston Almond). While in town, the world-traveler interviews for a museum position that would take her overseas. After her interview, Harper visits Graceland with Petra and Anna, where she was once a tour guide. They run into Priscilla Presley and Harper's former boss Regina (Lori Beth Sikes). Harper agrees to help them curate an exhibit on Elvis at Christmas and gives a private tour to wealthy widower Owen's (Adrian Grenier) children, Camilla (Nina Thurmond), Tyler (Trace Masters) and Adelaide (Laney Malone). In need of help while he prepares for a fundraiser, Owen hires Harper to au pair for the holidays.

Harper's spontaneity and Owen's love of structure clash. While Owen works on his fundraising presentation with his business partner, Davis (Damien Cecere), Harper disregards his to do list, and instead bakes with the children after school. When Owen returns home to a messy kitchen and undone chores, he is kind, but firm: the children need to stick with their schedule. Harper joins Owen and the children in looking for a Christmas tree. They have a great time, but when it comes to decorating it, Owen is pulled away to work. Luckily, Harper rallies the kids to make homemade decorations and they truly deck the halls. Owen is impressed and touched.

As Harper and Owen grow closer, Harper advances in consideration for the museum position. Owen encourages her to have confidence, and Harper encourages Owen to break his routine and spend more time with his children. Owen follows her advice and joins Harper and the kids sledding. When Harper joins Owen at an elegant holiday party, they both share about their past relationships and struggling to find love again. At the party, Owen also realizes that the fundraising event he plans to host exactly mirrors this one. Harper, then, encourages him to hold his event at Graceland with the Elvis at Christmas exhibit opening.

Harper begins to have doubts about the overseas museum position, realizing she loves being closer to her family – and Owen – in Memphis. Reminding her of how very special Memphis and Graceland are, Priscilla Presley invites Harper, Owen, and the kids to decorate the Graceland Christmas tree, and Owen asks Harper to be his date to their event.

At Owen's fundraising event he listens to Harper's advice to speak from his heart and impresses the donors. Harper's exhibit impresses the executives at the museum so much that they offer her the overseas job, which she will need to start right after Christmas. Harper breaks the news to Owen right after he confesses his deep feelings for her. Torn between Graceland and a faraway land, Harper must decide if she will keep traveling the world, or will make her home for the holidays will be her forever home.
